

NT Anti-Discrimination Commission

Alice Springs Training – April/May 2018

Customised Training

Customised training courses can be organised for businesses or organisations that would prefer to have in-house training for their staff and are a cost effective way to train larger groups of people. These courses can be tailored to focus on the particular needs of an organisation to heighten the relevance of the training. Customised courses can include any of the workshops listed below.

Contact the office on 08 8999 1444 to discuss any specific training requirements you may have or email antidiscrimination@nt.gov.au.

Challenging Unconscious Bias Workshop

Explore diversity, improve inclusivity and tackle stereotypes in the workplace.

All humans have a natural preference for people who look like us, sound like us or share our interests. This form of bias could be unconsciously impacting on our decision-making in the workplace.

Unconscious bias takes effect at various stages during employment; as early as the recruitment stage.

Challenging unconscious bias occurs when we understand what unconscious bias is, recognise its prevalence in the workplace, and learn how to identify, address and reduce its impacts on our actions and decisions.

The workshop is divided into three parts.

Examining what unconscious bias is and where it comes from.

Exploring the impacts of unconscious bias on others in the real world.

Considering and discussing strategies that may help to reduce and manage unconscious bias and its consequences in the workplace; managing personal bias, organisational strategies and organisational cultural change.

The workshop is recommended for all staff particularly those involved in recruitment. When run as customised training, it can be tailored for management.
